GRANDPARENTS AIN'T WHAT THEY USED TO BE...

They're no longer old-timers.

It's not that grandparenthood occurs sooner today than it once did . . . it still takes about 50 years to get a third generation started) . . . it's that today's grandparents are able to work better, play harder . . . and live longer than their grandparents before them.

Providing the better medicines and treatment techniques that increase longevity today—and will stretch it even further tomorrow—is the job of the health team: physicians, pharmacists, pharmaceutical manufacturers, and other health professionals.

Some day, great-grandparents won't be old-timers either.

Market Opens For Poplar Walnut Logs

An important new market for poplar and walnut logs from Appomattox County has been established with the construction of Helms Veneer Corporation at Rocky Mount, Va.

The construction of this new plant will provide a new source of income for the producers of poplar and walnut logs in Appomattox County.

The new facility, which is expected to begin operations around October 1, with a plant investment of several million dollars, will include a six-foot band mill and a two-slicer and one stayloo face veneer plant. Production of the plants will be directed to the furniture and stock panel industries of the United States and Canada.

Log and timber representatives are invited to visit Helms Veneer Corporation at Rocky Mount Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturdays, 8 a.m. to 2 noon. Mail and telephone inquiries should be directed to Helms Veneer Corporation, Box 286, Rocky Mount, Virginia, or phone 483-5141.

Committee Asked To Secure Subdivision Name

A committee has been named to make plans for a "contest" or other means for securing a name for a section of the county presently without a "title". The three member committee consists of Mrs. Rachel Lawson, John Curtis Caldwell, Dr. J. A. Mathews.

The area in question on the Red House road comprises many newly built homes and others in a rapidly developing community, a part of lands formerly owned by Schyler Patterson Coleman, and others of his family who owned many hundreds of acres there.

Mrs. William Patterson Coleman said that though she "is not a Coleman, except through marriage," she is interested in the project. She explains that it must become quite involved for residents to explain to everyone, "My home is on the Red House road."

Better Crop Sourwood Honey

G. C. Maxwell, of Pamplin, Virginia's largest producer of sourwood honey, reports almost a "complete sellout" this year of his crop. A late freeze in the spring of '63 plus unprecedented drought in the four counties where Maxwell keeps his hives spelled the end to his crop last year. This year it's a different story, and Maxwell reports many calls for the light colored delicately flavored "sourwood honey", in part because his bees are placed near flowering sourwood trees to collect the sweet scented nectar.

Thompson, of Rustburg, who has represented Campbell County in the General Assembly as a member of the House of Delegates for many years, termed the value of the Southside Electric Cooperative's program as "essential" and "progressive" to the residents in Southside Virginia. He was talking with G. T. Connelly, of Gladys, a member of the Board of Directors of the Southside Electric Cooperative and an ardent worker for rural progress in Southside Virginia. Mr. Connelly was visiting with Mr. Thompson at his office, seeking comments and guidance so that he would feel completely informed on needs in Southside Virginia in which the Southside Electric Cooperative could contribute assistance.

"Because I am deeply interested in sound agricultural programs and will do everything I can to make available these needs to the rural people in my section of Virginia, I have always been interested in the steps which the Board of Directors of Southside Electric Cooperative have taken to contribute modern electrical benefits to their people.

"This organization is one of which all Virginians can be proud because it is owned by the rural people here in Southside Virginia whom it serves.

"In studying the annual reports each year, I have noted that the Board has made it a policy of not only making its loan and interest payments on time, but has anticipated many of these repayments on the principal and is really ahead of schedule in its obligations to the Rural Electrification Administration from which these funds are borrowed.

"These reports also show that the Organization pays taxes to the Federal, State and County governments.

"The history of this program has proven that it was a very essential one in order to give rural people the benefits of electricity as it became a requirement in the steps of progress that has kept Virginia's agriculture abreast of the times.

"I shall look forward to attending the annual meeting in September, and certainly feel that every member has every right to be proud of the progress this organization has made.

"While the greater part of this progress and service has resulted from the leadership which its efficient Board of Directors has given, and its management has carried out, interest of the members is the backbone of the strength of this organization.

"Rural Virginia people know what they want and this is one of the programs that they developed and its progress has proven its value to them."

So said Campbell County's member in the Virginia General Assembly, Lawrence R. Thompson, of Rustburg, who, as a legislator, is one of that group's top leaders, serving as a member of the powerful Appropriations Committee in the House of Delegates, and of the all-important Roads Committee, a group with vital interest in rural Virginia.
